Thanks to robust audience and critical response, The Marriage Zone extends through June 2.

Cal and Beth are selling their home. They're visited by Skip and Ellie, an engaged couple, very much in love who are eager to buy their first home. They're joined by Mike and Liz, apparently a couple of lookie-loos who decided to drop by and take a peek at the house for sale. The three couples get to chatting and begin to marvel at just how much they have in common. WAY too much in common, in fact. So much in common that it begins to become surreal.

One couple is young, one couple is middle-aged, and one couple is mature. Yet their destinies seem to be strangely linked.

You are traveling to another dimension: A dimension of sight and sound and imagination. You are entering....The Marriage Zone.

The Marriage Zone is the fourth in a series of comedies exploring the dynamics of the relationships between men and women by playwright and director Jeff Gould. His previous works include Troubled Waters, Is There Sex After Marriage, and It's Just Sex. The latter play has received productions across the globe. Gould won the Valley Theatre Award for best writer of an original play when The Marriage Zone had its world premiere in 2017. Gould has also been an actor and comedian and is a professional poker player.

The company of actors assembled by Gould and Casting Director Patrick Baca, CSA for this production of The Marriage Zone includes Rene Ashton, Ben Bergstrom, Dane Bowman, Matt Harrison, Alex Hyde-White, Dawn Joyal, Jacee Jule, Britt Rose, Mark Sande, Leslie Stratton, Cameron Tagge and Monica Young.

If you enjoy shows that include love and laughs, then you, too, should enter The Marriage Zone.
