

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Hank Curry is an actor, writer, director, and clown. He is a graduate of Temple University with a B.A. in Theatre and Communications. Professionally, he has worked with EgoPo Classic Theatre, Simpatico Theatre Project, InterAct, Zimbo Films, The Renegade Company, and Power Street Theatre Company, among others. He has had work commissioned by The Manayunk Theatre Company and New City Stage Company. Hank has self-produced five original works, including "The Fortress", an official selection of the Buster Keaton Centennial Celebration. He has also taught theatre for grades 4-6 as part of the Philadelphia Arts Education Partnership, and was an artist in residence for the Philadelphia School for Circus Arts in 2016.

"Experimental theatre is alive and well in Philadelphia [thanks to] Hank Curry..."

- REP Radio

"...Curry shows himself to be a fine actor..."

- Phindie

"His ability to switch characters at a moment's notice, as well as his desire to constantly try new approaches to his characters, sets the bar high."

- Jeremy Gable, playwright

"I found Hank's use of rhythm and language to be uncanny and his presence to be remarkably intriguing."

- Jill Harrison, director

"He's the funniest guy in the world!" – Ashley, age 6